City's budget proposal calls for service cuts

JAMES DURBIN | DAILY EGYPTIAN

Mayor Brad Cole answers questions during the public comments section regarding the proposed fiscal year 2010 budget Tuesday at the City Council meeting in the Carbondale Civic Center.

City manager says pension costs could lead to property tax

Brandy Oxford

BRANDY.OXFORD@SIUDE.COM

The city's budget proposal is up more than $10 million from last year, and the city manager said Carbondale should consider instituting a property tax to cover the cost of city employees' pension funds.

The increase is mostly because of some large projects, including the new police and fire stations and a new water tower.

City Manager Allen Gill warned that the tough economy could force Carbondale to cut back some services residents have come to expect.

Gill also said in the budget proposal he submitted to the council that the lack of growth in sales tax revenue could force the city to consider instituting a property tax to pay the pension costs. When the council voted against a property tax in December, it was agreeing to cut back and postpone expenses, Gill said.

"If expenses keep going up, it's going to be a lot more difficult in the future," Gill said.

The council is scheduled to vote on the possibility of implementing a property tax in December, Gill said.

Cutbacks include buying fewer police cars; major street and sidewalk repairs; reducing home conversion grants; and leaving some vacant positions unfilled. One of these is an inspector for the city's rental inspection program, which is funded by a $35 per-unit fee the city began charging landlords this year.

Jane Adams, a landlord in Carbondale, said the fee was intended to pay for two new rental inspectors, but only one was hired.

"The aim of the rental inspection fee was to improve the quality of rental housing in Carbondale," Adams said. "Six full-time inspectors would be extremely hard pressed to maintain the rigorous inspection schedule required to inspect all rental properties within three years and simultaneously enforce environmental, parking and occupancy standards."

Mayor Brad Cole said the city spent roughly $71,000 on a new data entry system that would bring a greater level of efficiency to the jobs of the inspectors. City Councilman Chris Wissmann said the software could make it possible for the city to publish citation and violation information on its Web site.

The city estimated an increase of roughly $11.5 million in revenue generated from bonds and loans to fund capital projects, such as the new water tower, police station and fire station.

The city's planned spending exceeds its predicted revenue by $3 million, but Gill said the city would balance the general fund budget before it goes up for approval at the April 21 City Council meeting. The city's operating money, which constitutes the bulk of its expenses, comes from the general fund, Gill said.

"That's where it's really critical to live within your means," Gill said. "You don't want to borrow money to pay for operating expenses. That does not make sense."

University pays Kill, lawsuit dismissed

Barton Lorimor
DAILY EGYPTIAN
BARTON.LORIMOR@SIUDE.COM

Former Saluki football coach Jerry Kill was reimbursed for paid vacation days and will not surrender a portion of his salary for accepting another coaching position, his attorney said Tuesday.

Kill motioned Thursday to dismiss a lawsuit against the SIU Board of Trustees in which he claimed the university owed him money. Kill filed the lawsuit in February 2008, when he said the university was obligated to reimburse him for paid vacation time and had illegally fined him for taking the head football coach position at Northern Illinois University in December 2007.

"This monetary problem happened so fast that I don't think NIU knew about it."

— Rod Sievers
university spokesman

Shari Rhode, Kill's attorney, said she filed to dismiss the case soon after the university paid Kill for paid vacation time provided in his contract with SIU. Because the university reimbursed Kill, Rhode said there was no reason to wait for a judicial ruling. Rhode would not reveal how much the university paid Kill.

Kill signed with the Huskies on Dec. 13, 2007, and took 25 days of paid vacation, according to court records. Kill's contract relapsed at the end of each year until it expired in 2011, university spokesman Rod Sievers said.

In Kill's contract with SIU, the university reserved the right to fine Kill for "liquidated damages," meaning money lost as a result of Kill's departure. The university fined Kill $57,772.44 based on that provision of the contract after he signed with NIU.

Sievers said it had not been determined whether the university would sue Kill for those damages.

Though it is legal for the university to seek liquidated damages, Rhode said the fine was illegal because it penalized Kill for accepting another job.

Hill shrinks as Saluki Way plows ahead

Sewer, water lines among construction crews' progress

Stile T. Smith
DAILY EGYPTIAN
STS34@SIU.EDU

The large hill that once stood to the east of SIU Arena is now about half the height it used to be, and will be gone completely in the coming weeks.

As part of Saluki Way, administrative offices and facilities for football and men's and women's basketball will be added to the arena's east side where the hill stands.

Athletic Director Mario Moccia said it's different watching the hill, which has existed since he took the position in August 2006, get smaller and smaller every day.

"It was just kind of odd to see something that's been there for so long removed," Moccia said. "I actually called (associate athletic director) Jason (King) because he was out there and I said 'Hey, there goes the staircase.'"

Moccia said bulldozers were used to remove the staircase and the dirt from the hill.

Saluki Way is the massive over-haul on the east side of campus. The first phase carries a price tag of $83 million, with $20 million expected to come from a tax imposed by the city of Carbondale, $41.5 million set to come from student fees and the remaining $21.5 million needed in private donations.

King said dirt from the hill is being used as topsoil for the site of the new football stadium, and the dirt is being removed little by little.

"It's basically just shaving it down," King said. "It's just a process that takes time."

Director of Plant and Service Operations Phil Gatton said other work that's been done includes site work, implementing of water and sewer lines and excavation of the site of the new football stadium.

Gatton said the weather has continued to cooperate with the project, which is one of the keys to construction running smoothly.

"Progress has been going well because of the weather, mainly," Gatton said. "We're probably a little ahead of schedule at this point. Contractors have been able to work pretty well everyday. We've had a couple days where rain has shut us down, but it's going well right now."

Gatton said as long as the weather continues to cooperate, the project will stay ahead of schedule.

Moccia said most people have responded well to the construction.

"I think the biggest thing is they've said is 'Gee whiz, they really are going to do this,'" Moccia said. "We could talk about it, we could have groundbreakings, we could do whatever, but for a great many people, I believe it took this for them to think that it was actually going to happen."

Moccia said he has been happy with the progress he has seen with the project on a daily basis.

"When you have a bad day, or something doesn't go well, you can look at that and it's a constant positive reminder that there's progress being made," Moccia said. "You can talk about this until the cows come home, but now they're actually doing it."

Taliban threaten strike on Washington

Kathy Gannon
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ISLAMABAD — Pakistan’s Taliban chief claimed responsibility Tuesday for a deadly assault on a police academy, saying he wanted to retaliate for U.S. missile attacks on the militant bases on the border with Afghanistan.

Baitullah Mehsud, who has a $5 million bounty on his head from the United States, also vowed to “amaze everyone in the world” with an attack on Washington or even the White House.

The FBI, however, said he had made similar threats previously and there was no indication of anything imminent.

Mehsud, who gave a flurry of media interviews Tuesday, has no record of actually striking targets abroad although he is suspected of being behind a 10-man cell arrested in Barcelona in January 2008 for plotting suicide attacks in Spain.

Pakistan’s former government and the CIA consider him the prime suspect behind the December 2007 killing of former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto. And Pakistani officials accuse him of harboring foreign fighters, including Central Asians linked to al-Qaida, and of training suicide bombers.

But analysts doubt that Taliban fighters carried off Monday’s raid on the Lahore academy on their own, saying the group is likely working more closely than ever with militants based far from the Afghan frontier.

It’s a constellation that includes al-Qaida, presenting a formidable challenge to the United States as it increases its troop presence in the region, not to mention nuclear-armed Pakistan’s own stability.

Mehsud told The Associated Press that the academy and other recent attacks were revenge for stepped-up American missile strikes into Pakistan’s border badlands.

“Soon we will launch an attack in Washington that will amaze everyone in the world,” Mehsud said in a telephone interview with an Associated Press reporter. He offered few details, though in a separate recorded conversation with local Dewa radio station, he said the White House was a target.

FBI spokesman Richard Kolko said the bureau was not aware of any imminent or specific threat to the United States, despite what the Pakistani Taliban leader said.

“He has made similar threats to the U.S. in the past,” said Kolko.

State Department spokesman Gordon Duguid said he had not seen any reports of Mehsud’s comments but that he would “take the threat under consideration.”

The ruthless attack on Lahore’s outskirts Monday left at least 12 people dead, including seven police, and sparked an eight-hour standoff with security forces that ended when black-clad commandos stormed the compound. Some of the gunmen blew themselves up.

“Soon we will launch an attack in Washington that will amaze everyone in the world.”

— Baitullah Mehsud
Pakistan’s Taliban chief

The siege-style approach using heavily armed militants came just weeks after the deadly ambush of Sri Lanka’s visiting cricket team in the heart of Lahore. Both attacks were reminiscent of November’s siege of Mumbai, India — also blamed on Pakistani militants.

A senior police investigator, Zulfikar Hameed, told Dawn News TV, that the men arrested for the attack have corroborated Mehsud’s involvement.

Besides Mehsud, a little-known group believed linked to him also claimed credit. Mehsud declined to discuss the group, Fedayeen al-Islam, or any others who might have been involved.

Pakistan Interior Ministry chief Rehman Malik said one attacker who was captured was Afghan, and that the initial investigation suggested the conspiracy originated in South Waziristan tribal region, Mehsud’s stronghold. But Malik also said the al-Qaida-linked group Lashkar-e-Jhangvi might have played a role. Officials have said three gunmen are in custody.

“In my view, it’s not done by one group,” said Mohammed Amir Rana, a Pakistani analyst well-versed in the intricacies of militant groups. “One group has the major role in providing the fighters or one group might be providing the logistics or intelligence. And one group provided the financing.”

A variety of militant groups operate in Pakistan beyond al-Qaida and the Taliban, and officials and analysts say it appears the coordination among some of them is increasing. Of particular concern are violent groups based in Punjab, Pakistan’s most populated province, which borders India.

Some Punjabi groups have their roots in the dispute with India over the Kashmir region. The Pakistani spy agency is believed to have helped set them up and maintain some links, a prospect that vexes U.S. officials.

Others have different origins.

Jhangvi, for instance, is a sectarian extremist group blamed for a stream of atrocities against minority Shiite Muslims. In recent years, it has evolved, Rana said, and is believed to provide foot-soldiers and suicide bombers for al-Qaida operations. Qari Hussein, a Jhangvi member, was named in Mehsud’s Pakistani Taliban council in 2007.

The groups’ membership is fluid and overlapping. They are riven with feuds. But analysts say they are finding a common cause in striking America and its allies, while also focusing on spreading Taliban-style rule over more and more of Pakistan.

Interviews in recent months with three Afghan and Pakistani Taliban operatives, who demanded anonymity for security reasons, suggest a Pakistani crackdown on some groups following the Mumbai assault has prompted many operatives of Punjab-based groups to seek sanctuary in the northwest.

The Mumbai attacks were specifically blamed on Lashkar-e-Taiba, a Punjab-based group fighting in Kashmir. Both Taliban and American military commanders have reported Taiba members even in Afghanistan’s northeast. Masood Azhar, a Kashmiri militant leader wanted by India, is reportedly in South Waziristan with Mehsud.

GM, Chrysler race deadlines to hold off bankruptcy

Tom Krishner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — He doesn’t know exactly what the Obama administration wants him to cut, but Fritz Henderson, the new CEO of General Motors Corp., isn’t waiting around to find out.

Deeper. Harder. Faster.

Those were the words he used Tuesday as he outlined how the ailing automaker plans to meet a June 1 deadline to fix its debt-ridden balance sheet, cut billions in costs and take other steps to transform itself into a profitable entity.

It’s the same government-imposed race that Chrysler LLC is running, only GM’s smaller neighbor has to cover more distance in half the time.

The Auburn Hills, Mich., automaker must make the same cuts as GM, and sign up Fiat Group SpA as a partner, all in 30 days. Fiat’s CEO jetted to Detroit for intense negotiations, but if Chrysler doesn’t meet the deadline, it’s almost certainly destined for the auction house.

For GM, failing to take quick action means surrendering to court supervision in bankruptcy, something the company has resisted in the past but Henderson said is now “certainly more probable.”

The companies have yet to receive specifics from the task force on how much more they must cut and where, but Henderson is proceeding with deeper cuts and pulling previously announced measures forward.

“We need to reinvent General Motors, and we need to do it in a very, very abbreviated time frame here in 2009 so that we’re not spending our time careening from crisis to crisis in the future,” he told reporters at GM’s headquarters complex in downtown Detroit.

There are formidable obstacles, though. Even with less demanding hurdles in the government’s original loan terms, GM’s bondholders have been reluctant to settle their $28 billion for what may be pennies on the dollar.

Obama’s European trip focusing on economic crisis, NATO

LONDON (AP) — President Barack Obama embarked on his Europe trip Tuesday, with a hefty economic and national security agenda for his first journey across the Atlantic since taking office two months ago.

The president and first lady Michelle Obama arrived in London Tuesday local time. First up for the president was a summit of the world’s economic powers to address the global financial meltdown.

Obama planned to meet with leaders of Britain, Russia and China — major players in the U.S. financial system.

U.S. and Iran diplomats overcome tension in cordial meeting

THE HAGUE (AP) — In a cautious first step toward unlocking 30 years of tense relations, senior U.S. diplomat Richard Holbrooke had a brief but cordial meeting with Iran’s deputy foreign minister Tuesday at an international conference on Afghanistan.

The rare diplomatic approach was the first official face-to-face interplay between the Obama administration and the Iranian regime. U.S. Secretary of State Clinton cautioned that the talks between Holbrooke and Iranian diplomat Mehdi Akhundzadeh were promising but not “substantive.”

Netanyahu becomes Israel’s prime minister

JERUSALEM (AP) — Benjamin Netanyahu, taking office as Israel’s new leader Tuesday, promised to seek “full peace” with the Arab and Muslim world, but refused to utter the words the world was waiting to hear: “Palestinian state.”

The well-spoken, U.S.-educated hawk took pains to portray himself as a pragmatist, telling a packed parliament that Israel does not want to rule the Palestinians.

“Under the permanent status agreement, the Palestinians will have all the authority to rule themselves,” Netanyahu said.

Researcher uncovers second face within famed Nefertiti bust

BERLIN (AP) — Researchers in Germany have used a modern medical procedure to uncover a secret within one of ancient Egypt’s most treasured artworks — the bust of Nefertiti has two faces.

A team led by Dr. Alexander Huppertz, director of the Imaging Science Institute at Berlin’s Charite hospital and medical school, discovered a detailed stone carving that differs from the external stucco face when they performed a computed tomography scan on the bust.

The findings are the first to show that the stone core of the statue is a highly detailed sculpture of the queen, Huppertz said.

Diverse gallery at the Glove

Second-year students in MFA program exhibit work

Genna Ord
DAILY EGYPTIAN
GORD@SIU.EDU

For 15 SIUC students, there is no such thing as a sophomore slump.

This week is the School of Art and Design's Master of Fine Arts exhibition for students in their second year of the three-year program. The group's show, called "Under My Thumb," is located in the Surplus Gallery at the Glove Factory.

The collection is open to the public 8 to 11 a.m. and 3 to 8 p.m. today, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 3 to 7 p.m. Thursday and 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. and noon to 2 p.m. Friday. There will also be a closing reception from 7 to 9 p.m. on Friday.

"Under My Thumb" brings together students from all specializations of the program, from glass and sculpture to 2D and printmaking. The number of works each student presents varies, with some of the artists having only two, while others have more than 10.

"It's kind of a culmination," said Chris Scamehorn, a graduate student from Union, Mich., specializing in ceramics. "We just try to capture what we've been doing and bring that across."

The gallery's range is a large one. One artist created many of her works using human hair, and a few pieces of another artist's were formed from fabric. Different glass techniques and many kinds of metals can also be seen throughout the exhibition.

Claudia N. Torres-Ambriz, a student from Oxnard, Cal., studying sculpture, used wood from local trees as well as various metals for some of her works.

"Art is a lifestyle choice," she said. "You just keep making it until you're ancient."

Torres-Ambriz said the exhibition is the annual review for the second-year students, where professors as well as the community can see the progress they have made.

SIUC's master's program for fine arts is one of the best, she said. There are more students involved in it than most other schools, and the available equipment allows them to do almost anything they want, she said.

Jenny Crescuillo, a graduate student from Mt. Vernon, Ohio, specializing in glass, said in addition to good facilities, the three-year program is special because many other colleges offer only two years of instruction.

Crescuillo said completing the master's program, which is the terminal degree for fine art students, qualifies an artist to teach at a collegiate level as well as making it easier to find a position as a resident artist.

"Having a master's degree gives you more clout in your field," she said. "It teaches you how to think in an artistic way at a more professional level."

Regardless of the level of study, art is still a process of creation and discovery.

"We actually understand ourselves as creators," Scamehorn said. "We come to understand more of what we are and why we're here."

This self-discovery also helps relate to other people, Torres-Ambriz said.

"You build up the courage to respect your desires and those of other people, too," she said.

INSIGHT

Appreciate all great things Illinois

EDYTA BŁASZCZYK | DAILY EGYPTIAN

Many people around the country, and even the state, are not aware of the beautiful wineries that scatter southern Illinois. It is quite a shame. The southern part of the state is known for our university and awesome forestry, but not for the chardonnays, cabernet and pinots.

This past Sunday I spent my afternoon with good company at the Blue Sky Vineyard in Makanda. With blue skies and fluffy white clouds, we celebrated the arrival of spring by eating homemade sandwiches, dipping chips in salsa and sipping on Mysterioso and Cabernet Franc. I could not have imagined a better lazy Sunday.

When the temperature reaches at least 70 degrees and the sun begins to beam enough to give people tans, I highly urge everyone to take the trip to Blue Sky and make a picnic of their own. There is always a fantastic musician playing, giving the place a nice feel to it.

If Blue Sky is not your scene, you can choose from more than 20 different vineyards and wineries located in southern Illinois.

The message I am trying to relay is this: It is getting warm outside, so ease out of your hibernation mode and take a quick trip to a winery. It’s worth it. It is an ideal place to go on a date, take visiting relatives or gather a group of friends for a relaxing and fun time.

These wineries seem to be a big secret that only southern Illinoisans know about, but I believe we should break the silence, and spread the word about our wine.

Barack Obama and Abraham Lincoln should not be Illinois’ only claim to fame.

By Linda C. Black

Today's Birthday — You're so cute this year, you can get just about whatever you want. You can learn quickly too, which is always nice. And you have friends who are willing to help. But they're sensitive. The more gentle you can be, the better.

To get the advantage check the day's rating: 10 is the easiest day, 0 the most challenging.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — Today is a 8 — Hanging out at home is a good place for you to come up with new inspirations. It frees your subconscious mind. Comfort snacks help, too. Chocolate is recommended.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — Today is a 5 — You're under pressure, but you've got good support. Your basics are sound. You can resist and survive just about any calamity that comes your way. You're a rock, with an imagination.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) — Today is a 8 — Get serious about your career, make some radical moves. Don't do it just for the fun of it; do it to make more money. If you also have more fun, so much the better.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) — Today is an 6 — Others have been bossing you around, and you've been holding back. This is good. Keep doing it. You can get your point across in more subtle ways. No need to raise your voice.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — Today is a 8 — Others rely on you to help them make sound decisions. If you keep doing that, they'll give you even more authority. You might as well know this ahead of time. It's about to happen again.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Today is a 5 — Your work should be very interesting now. There's certainly plenty of it. Don't discuss it with anyone but the people involved. Strict confidentiality is required.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Today is a 9 — There seems to be a very attractive person in your life right now. Don't toss your responsibilities and run away to a life of romance. Make time in your busy schedule for a little more romance now.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Today is a 6 — If you can spend just a little more time and fine-tune your plans somewhat, you'll find they flow effortlessly. You will be able to tell when it's time to act. Trust your intuition.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Today is a 8 — You'd rather be playing. That won't pay the rent. Do you have enough stashed away to take a vacation? If not, better get back to the office, or wherever you apply your trade.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Today is a 5 — You're growing impatient and can't understand the hassles you encounter. Your method is practical. Why don't they agree? Maybe you need to spend more time educating them.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Today is a 7 — Stay busy with a new assignment. You think you already know how this is going to turn out, but you don't. You can increase income markedly if you're quick. Pay attention.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) — Today is an 7 — You'd like to get going, but where? Don't make a move until you decide. Ask an older person who has a better view of the whole situation. No need to go down a dead end.

the team's first practices last year.

"We have added plays, you'll see us using a lot more with shifts and motions. It's definitely a more complex offense than what we executed last fall."

In addition to opening the offense, expect the SIU defense to expand on its 3-4 scheme.

The Salukis ranked fourth in the MVFC in total defense, ranking eighth in the nine-team conference in passing defense, but ranked second in rushing defense. SIU returns 10 of its 11 defensive starters and defensive coordinator Bubba Schweigert is looking for the defense to improve on last year's results.

"Judging from our past performance, we can get a lot better just doing our base stuff," Schweigert said. "We look for a big improvement this spring from last fall because it's the second time guys are

Next stop for UConn express: the Final Four

Doug Feinberg

TRENTON, N.J. — The Connecticut express is headed to St. Louis for the Final Four, a trip the perfect Huskies have seemed destined to make all season.

Maya Moore scored 25 points and undefeated UConn beat Arizona State 83-64 on Tuesday to advance to the national semifinals for the second straight season and ninth time in the last 14 years.

Renee Montgomery added 22 points for the Huskies (37-0), who will face Stanford on Sunday in a rematch of last season's national semifinal. The Cardinal won that game before losing in the championship to Tennessee.

UConn hasn't lost since and is two wins away from the program's third perfect season.

Danielle Orsillo scored 18 to lead Arizona State (26-9), which played the Huskies as competitively as just about any other opponent this season but still had its season end in the regional final for the second time in three years.

It was a busy day for Moore, who made The Associated Press All-America team for the second straight season.

She also broke UConn's single-season scoring record on a step-back 3-pointer late in the first half that gave the Huskies their first double-digit lead of the game 34-24.

The sensational sophomore passed Kara Wolters' record of 694 points set in 1995-96. Wolters was sitting court-side doing radio for a Connecticut station.

And Moore nabbed another honor after the game, being selected the Trenton Regionals most outstanding player.

Moore was joined on the All-America team by Montgomery, marking the first time a pair of teammates were on the first-team since 2000. Tina Charles, who added 18 points and 13 rebounds against the Sun Devils, earned second-team honors.

Connecticut had dismantled opponents this season, including beating eight ranked teams by an average of 31 points.

Arizona State tried to wear down UConn with its hockey-like substitution pattern. Coach Charli Turner Thorne put in three or four fresh players every few minutes.

It worked early on as UConn struggled for the second straight game against a Pac-10 opponent. The Huskies turned the ball over 12 times in the first half and Montgomery picked up three fouls early on sending her to the bench.

For the first time since 1906, both Chicago baseball teams entered the playoffs in the same season as the Cubs and White Sox won their respective divisions last season. Who will be this season's champions in the AL and NL Central?

LUIS C. MEDINA

@siu.edu

Unless the Cubs allow the ghosts of black cats, billy goats and Mark Prior's elbow to haunt their souls, the North Side Nine should take the NL Central in a cakewalk. With that said, expect the Pirates to come out of nowhere in 2009. The White Sox don't have a leadoff man or a respectable back-end of the starting rotation, but they do have Ozzie Guillen, who is crazy enough to find ways to win. So, I'll go with the Twinkies to win the AL Central.

Both are tough divisions to call, all the teams have question marks. For the AL, I'll take the Twins. Francisco Liriano looks good this spring, and their infield has a lot of talent and potential – if it is healthy. In the NL, the Cubs haven't lost too much. Their offense is still potent and Bradley strengthens what was a questionable outfield. A healthy rotation of Zambrano, Harden and Lilly could be scary. With all that though, I'll take the Cardinals because I am an unapologetic homer. Sure, they have no closer right now, an outfielder at second base and no certain center fielder – but they're my pick!

I think the Cubs have a repeat in them. The White Sox? Not so much, and I'll just rattle off my reasons: Bartolo Colon's health issues, Jose Contreras' health issues and Dewayne Wise's skill issues. I don't understand why so many people like the Tigers because their rotation is still shaky. Edwin Jackson may have been a fluke last year, so he's not the answer. In the AL Central this year, I like the Twins.

She was ranked No. 1 in doubles and No. 9 in the ITA NAIA poll. In two and a half seasons, she was 42-5 in singles and 55-6 in doubles.

Mawisire said she decided to transfer to SIU for her senior season because she wanted to do something new.

"I thought, 'OK, why not see what the competition was like,'" she said.

Mawisire continued to build on the successful career she had at Lindsey Wilson College by taking on No. 1 opponents and dispatching them one at a time.

Mawisire's play is rubbing off on her teammates as well. Blacketer said her doubles partner's play is something that inspires the team during matches.

"It really helps seeing a player of her caliber on your team," Blacketer said. "It is inspiring to try to play at the level that she does."

Mawisire said she would not focus on keeping her undefeated streak going and just concentrate on playing as well as she can.

"You keep your focus and play each match as it comes," Mawisire said. "Work hard every game and that's all you can do. That's what I am hoping for."

Cy Young Awards: Josh Beckett in the AL and Johan Santana for the NL. I like Beckett because Ervin Santana will miss about a month for the Angels, and I'm wary of Roy Halladay; he pitched 246 innings last year, 220 the two seasons before that and then before that he couldn't stay healthy for two seasons, so I can see him missing time. Then for Johan Santana, he could have given Tim Lincecum a tougher race for the award last year had the Mets' bullpen not squandered so many of his potential wins. Oh, and not receiving any votes: A.J. Burnett and C.C. Sabathia of the Yankees. You'll see.

MVPs: Kevin Youkilis for the AL and Manny Ramirez for the NL. Both these players put up MVP-caliber numbers last season, and I thought Youkilis should have won the award over his teammate, Dustin Pedroia. Manny couldn't win because he split the season between the Red Sox and Dodgers, and Albert Pujols arguably had his best season yet (which is saying a lot), but now he gets to face NL pitching for a full season. He will likely be on a better team than Pujols, which will put him over the edge in the minds of the voters.

And now, bragging rights amongst Cardinals, Cubs and White Sox fans: Cubs. I loved the Milton Bradley signing for the Cubs, because he's a robot programmed to hit and get on base, so they can live with the glitch that causes him to go haywire every so often. As for the White Sox, well, Dewayne Wise was named the starting center fielder and leadoff hitter, which is a lot to put on a career .214 hitter who hit .248 with a .293 on-base percentage last season. He's been around since 2000, so, really, if he could do this, one of those other teams would have figured that out by now. The Cardinals have three things working against them: A potentially shaky bullpen, a potentially shaky starting rotation and the Cubs in their division. Dave Duncan can only do so much, you know.

But it's not like Sox and Cards fans don't have an easy trump card in case Cubs fans become too abrasive over the course of the season. I won't say it here, though, because I'm ready for baseball season to begin, and the Sox don't truly have me feeling belligerent enough yet.

Give it a week.

Undefeated Mawisire invigorates Saluki tennis

Saluki tennis player Fadzai Mawisire is one of the top players on the team with a 13-0 record in her No. 1 singles matches and 11-2 in her No. 1 doubles matches.

Fadzai Mawisire

Fadzai Mawisire beats her opponents before she ever steps foot on the tennis court.

The undefeated Saluki tennis star has systematically mowed down opponents all season, and SIU coach Audra Nothwehr said it's Mawisire's mental preparation that sets her apart from her competition.

"She's not the flashiest person on the court. She doesn't hit or serve the ball the hardest," Nothwehr said. "But she has such a good game plan and she hits the ball so cleanly."

The senior is just one of the reasons the SIU women's tennis team started the season 10-4. She is 13-0 in her No. 1 singles matches, and 11-2 in No. 1 doubles matches with her partner, senior Ame Blacketer.

Mawisire said she could not explain exactly why she has been so successful, but she enters every match with an idea of what she wants to do.

"I take a few minutes before I play, think about what I want out of the game," Mawisire said. "If I can do those, then I'm happy."

Mawisire began her collegiate career at Lindsey Wilson College in Columbia, Ky., while being ranked No. 78 in the International Tennis Federation Junior rankings. She chose Lindsey Wilson because she was looking for "a small place, some place different." Nothwehr, her former coach at Lindsey Wilson, said she still remembers first meeting Mawisire.

"When we saw how good she did in juniors, we knew we had to grab her," Nothwehr said of Mawisire's performance in the under-18 division. "In the end, we were able to."

She made an immediate impact at Lindsey Wilson. She was undefeated in No. 3 singles in 2007, and was a National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics All-American in singles and doubles.

FOOTBALL

Lennon: Playbooks will open up in '09

Offense, defense to expand on last year's success

Luis C. Medina
DAILY EGYPTIAN
LCM1986@SIU.EDU

The SIU football team inched its way through a new set of playbooks in Dale Lennon's first season as head coach.

With a full season under their collective belt, the Salukis are using their spring practices to jump deeper into a complex playbook.

Lennon said he expects to have three-fourths of the offense and defensive playbooks to be installed by the end of the team's spring camp because of the aggressive approach the team and coaching staff has taken this offseason.

The second-year head coach said he has been pleased with his team's progression early in camp, as the returning Salukis are using what they learned last season and applying it to spring ball.

"The recall from last year is definitely there, and that's allowing us to accelerate what we're doing this spring," Lennon said.

SIU transitioned from the Jerry Kill era of offense, which featured a heavy dose of running plays, to a more balanced playbook that implemented a variety of the spread formation. Despite the change of philosophy, the Salukis averaged 29.4 points per game.

The SIU offense finished second in the Missouri Valley Football Conference in average passing yards per game (186.8 yards) and fifth in rushing yards (169.3 yards), and Lennon said he expects to see improvements because of the playbook's expansion.

EDYTA BLASZCZYK | DAILY EGYPTIAN

Saluki wide receiver Joe Allaria gets through the Northwestern defense during the Salukis' game Sept. 13. Allaria and the rest of the Salukis have started spring practice and second-year head coach Dale Lennon said he has been pleased with the early progress.

"We're much more comfortable with what we're doing offensively right now," Lennon said, compar-

LAZY SATURDAYS

What's the time? Baseball time

SCOTT MIESZALA

@siu.edu

At the end of this column, I will tell you who I think will have the bragging rights at SIU among fans of the White Sox, Cubs and Cardinals this season.

But first I want to get in some of my predictions for the 2009 season, which begins Sunday. This could give a little help in fantasy drafts if yours has not taken place already, as would earlier word that Carlos Marmol would not be the Cubs' closer this season. That was both illogical and inconsiderate to Marmol's fantasy owners.

Anyway, let's get into it ...

Breakout player: Twins right fielder Delmon Young. He hit .290 last year with 10 home runs, but he has reworked his swing and I predict at least 25 home runs and zero bats hurled at unsuspecting umpires from him. He finished last season strong, hitting .330 in September, and has hit .295 during spring training with three home runs. The fun will end for him and all Twins players in 2010, when they open their outdoor stadium in Minneapolis, Minn. It's cold there in April, so I have another 2010 prediction: For the first time ever, there will be a player put on the DL for hypothermia. What a terrible idea. Why not just put a retractable roof on that stadium?

The WBC's biggest victim pitcher: The Astros' Roy Oswalt. In 2006 it was Peavy and Javier Vazquez (or maybe Francisco Liriano, whose 2006 ended with Tommy John surgery that caused him to miss all of 2007 and most of 2008), who both had higher-than-usual ERAs in 2006 but had good seasons in 2007. Oswalt didn't pitch for team USA in the first WBC, so I think the odd spring schedule could mess with him, especially because he's starting to get up there in age. I figure his ERA will be up in the 4.25-4.75 range, and he'll lower that to his usual 3.00-3.50 next season.

Rookies of the Year: Brett Gardner for the AL and Cameron Maybin for the NL. Gardner was recently named the Yankees' starting center fielder, he's hit .364 this spring, and he has shown good plate discipline through the minor leagues. The question is, if Gardner becomes a fixture in center field at the New Yankee Stadium That's Practically Identical to the Old One, where does Joe Girardi move Derek Jeter in a few seasons? Wait, there's a precedent for this. They'd move Gardner to left field and Jeter into center, and again have the inferior defensive player in the more important position, just like with A-Rod at third base.
